

SECOND DAY: THE DAY OF THE MUSEUMS

Another zone that we visited on the next day is the zone of the port with a Rådhus or really peculiar City council, all plenty of sculptures and reliefs. Next we found the Akker Brygge, zone of leisure and commerce, with many people walking, and, to the other side, the strength and the castle of Akershus.

We have bought an Oslo Card Pass 24h that gives to access to all the public transport and all, yes, all the museums in a free way. It compensates vastly.

We visit the Peninsula of Bygdøy, with many museums, some of them very interesting. The museum of the villages or Norks Folkemuseum, really charming and very recommendable, with a representation of houses of all the country. The Frammuseet, with an Arctic boat, not too interesting. Kon-Tikimuseum with two representative boats.

We return to eat. We have a problem with the meals in just a short time that we took here. The prices are very lifted and everything is fastfoods of North American multinationals.

In the evening we go to the Vigelandsparken. A park wonder, pity bad weather that accompanies to us. It is all plenty of statues and allegorical human figures of Gustav Vigeland. A magnificent source and, finally, in all the stop, a monolith of twenty meters of height in granite of a single piece.

We spend the night to the port.

(Sorry, my english is so bad. Page translated with "Yahoo Babel Fish")